

Andrew Meehan, Vice President, Government Relations

Andrew Meehan is Vice President, Government Relations for GBTA. In that role Andrew manages GBTA's relationship with policy makers at all levels of government, and works to promote business travel friendly policies and ideas within the executive and legislative branches of government as well as like-minded associations and think tanks.

Andrew joins GBTA with over a decade of experience in government relations. Prior to joining GBTA, Andrew worked with policy makers, stakeholders and the media on implementation of the Real ID Act as Policy Director of Keeping Identities Safe. He also worked as the Acting Chief Executive Officer for the Identification Technologies Association, a leading nonprofit that represents the biometrics industry as Acting CEO, he worked with the Department of Homeland Security and its component agencies on technologies and solutions that could be applied to aviation and surface transportation. Andrew, also worked for the House Judiciary Committee under Chairman F. James Sensenbrenner (R-WI). Andrew received his Bachelors of Arts in American Studies from Hobart and William Smith Colleges. He is an avid runner and lives in Washington DC.